Description

Exceptional Roman Baroque Ebonised and Rosewood Cassetone with bone inlay and magnificent brass handles

Magnificent transition piece displaying classical ornamentation within a traditional Baroque form
Conceived to be a statement piece with contrast between the ebonised and patinated rosewood, the bone inlay and the large brasses

The bone inlay is delicately drawn with floral sprays and lovebirds, suggesting this could be a commemorative piece

The lion handles are indicative of the status of this piece and possibly allude to strength and courage

The rosewood used in the desk section has beautiful figuring and injects warmth and into the cassetone as does the top

The geometric inlay of the desk is mirrored and held by the geometric inlay on the sides

Hinged top decorated with bone inlay with trailing stems and tulip heads

The interior fitted with a central drawer and four drawers either side all inlaid with geometric stringing and the writing surface also the brass lock a late-18thc early -19thc replacement

False drawer enclosing the bureau above three pine lined drawers all decorated with central birds in flight and trailing stems

The sides with diamond stringing
